Genteel Recreation:

Or, the Pleasure of

ANGLING, A POEM. With a DIALOGUE

BETWEEN

Piscator and Corydon.

By JOHN WHITNET,
A Lover of the Angle.

LONDON,
Printed in the Year, 1700.

F836.1 * Genteel Recreation to sull of the form MALLENNIA A O E M AVIEW DISTORUE MATRIES WELL Pleason and Con By JO T VE A Lover of Luck Alle ECM DOTHUS from anderteam

My HONOURED FRIEND

JOHN HYDE, Efq;

SIR,

Summer to Angle in your great Pond at Winckburst, emboldens me in gratitude to present you with this little treatise on the pleasure of Angling; the observations are my own, and some of the Pleasure I received in your good Company when Angling at Heaver, and since in the Company of Capt. Comer, and an other Gentleman at Winckburst; where in one Day we raught about twenty brace of extraordinary large Carps with very sweet Eeles and Tench; I believe I shall hardly forget the Pearch of eighteen Inches long, caught by Capt. Comer, nor the Old Gentlemans resolution, while we were drinking a Dram of the Bottle, a Fish run away with his Rod, which he being un-willing to loose, stript off his Cloaths and leapt in, and in swimming proved too nimble for the Fish, for I assure you, he brought them both out with much content to regain his Rod

Sir, the Capt. assures me, there be larger Peareb in the Pond tho I never law a braver, hould I commend the Fish some may think I flatter, but of all the Ponds I ever Angled in, I never received fo much delight in fo little time, nor ever eat of sweeter or larger Carps, for all we caught that did not exceed fixteen or eighteen Inches, we turn'd into the water again, thinking it pity to kill them before they came to their full growth, which commonly exceeds twenty.

Sir, I know your Love to Fish and Angling, and how to your great cost, you have caused to be dig'd a large square Pond in your great Yard before your dwelling place at Sundridg, and storing it with brave Carps and other Fifh, which Pond contains in length three hundred Foot, and two hundred and ten foot in breadth, all dug out of the fide of a Hill to the depth of fourteen Foot, and wharfing it ninety foot against the Highway fide, with Extraordinary good Plancks of Oak, the Trees being fell'd in your own ground that made them, and then in the middle dle of the Pond a most delightful Summer House to go to by Boat, twelve foot long and ten foot broad, with a Fountain in the middle, where the water plays in sundry Figures; besides the Rails and Ballisters that compass it round, there's a Platform of lead on the top, with Rails and Ballisters to walk and Angle upon.

d

t

·

e n

a

y

of

n

ile

But that which gives the greater grace, in my Opinion, is the Summer House standing upon a Fish House, which beside the Fish there kept, is stored all round with Nests for Ducks, where they breed in abundance, and under the Eves of the uppermost Platform, there is an Ingenious contrivance for Coves, wherein the Pidgeons encrease extraordina ry; It's no easy matter for a Simon Suck-egg to Robeither of their Nests, unless he'll adventure at one time both Drowning and Hanging: 'Tis very pleafant walking round the Pond, where a Man hath fix or feven foot of Earth over his head on the one fide for a shelter, while the other side defends him from the water by a shade of Osiers.

I have also seen your round Fountain in your delightful best Garden, and the stock of Fish therein kept to be always at hand to pleasure your Friends, which is continually stored with Trouts and Carps of the largest size; I remember also the Oval Fountain in the ry for the younger fry, but above all, I admire at your Ingenuity in contriving that Square Pond on the top of your House, which contains good Carps and other Fish, and is an excellent divertisement when you are pleased to disport your self and friends with your fine Water Works, I admired once how the water ascended to that Height, to be always full of sweet and fresh water, till you were pleased to shew me how you perform'd it by the help of an Engine.

If there be delights any where, I think you have them all at home, for a Man to fee Fish swimming on the top of your House and the Fowls of Heaven to live and breed under the water, will be strange to those whose faith is too weak to believe, or capacity to understand your Ingenuity, how you have made Coves for Pidgeons under the Pond where they breed, that a Man may justly say, that only Lead keeps the two Elements a funder.

Sir, you know that what I write is truth, I would not have People think I equivocate when I tell them without Romancing, how that Pond on the Houses top serves not only to keep Fish, but also to play your fine Water Works, both in your Celler and in the round Fountain in your best Garden, but also in

y

be to

CC

ot

ly

al

A

th

W

re

tic

as

in

in the Ovall Fountain in the fore Court, where the water rifes twenty foot Perpendicular; neither must I forget the same water runing through several Meanders, Plays also in the Summer House that stands in the great Pond.

Sir, as you have to my thinking all the pleasure the Water and the Air can afford you at home, fo I know you can have abundance more when you are pleafed to divert your felf at Bore-place, and injoy the Pleasure of the great Pond at Winckburst either in the Summer time with your Angle, or in the Winter with your Gun in your Boat, when the wild Ducks and other Fowl refort thither in great Numbers, few Ponds being of that extent as to cover twenty Acres, which it is most commonly in the VVinter; beside your other Pond call'd Baillies, which generally covers twelve Acres of ground, as also the lower Pond that contains fix Acres and feeds two Mills to grind Corn. these Ponds being extreamly well stored with Fish and Wild Fowl in Winter. renders your Injoyments beyond expectation.

d

-

te

at

to er

he

so in as your Pretty Warren for Coneys closed in with a substantial strong stone Wall.

 did did I think, I could escape the censure of flattery of which I was never Guilty, and since I have been partaker of most of them in your Company, and hope still with your Permission to injoy them, I do with true thankfulness subscribe my self,

SIR,

Your most Humble and

Obliged Servant,

JOHN VVHITNEY.

THE

the pleasing of supelled the are use controls

by booking a well groun Fith by Canal

10 fee men felt bauth in forms

PREFACE

TOTHE

Lovers of Angling.

Gentlemen,

of

1

His little treatise of the Pleasure of Angling I Composed for my own Diversion, not that I Glory of being an Artist in that barmless Recreation; Really, I cannot presume to be the only expert in that Art, knowing there be many abler Artists, especially that Ingenious Author of the Innocent Epicure whose Poem is worthy Admiration; I have taken nothing from bim, nor others who have wrote of the Art of Angling, and think my own Experience is best to display my own thoughts, which I have done in a kind of rambling way, my thoughts some. time run on the Muses, as well as on Fishes, for which reason I have endeavoured to put my beloved Exercise in Verse, most was Composed by the River side, in such seasons the Fish did not

Yield the pleasure I expelsed, all are my own observations which I have truly related, with some Accidents which gave me good Divertion, and am as well pleased to see my self baulk'd sometimes, by loosing a well grown Fish by Carelessness or Accident, as to have him in my Bag, as you may perceive in some places in the Poem; I look upon him to be a good Artist, that takes some, not be that takes all; I am no engrosser, neither am I covetous of them, giving most and the best to Friends, and willingly instruct any that bear me Company, and are desirous to be Proficients in the Art.

By giving them all the Infructions I can. with the knowledge of the baits I use, which frees me from the thoughts of using preposterous baits, Some who have been Angling with me, have been possessed with a fancy that I had an Art to mingle something with my baits, and for that rea-In took more Fish than themselves, to undeceive them, I have given them of the same they have seen me bait my Hook with, yet they were never the better Artists; Nay, I have given then my Rod and Line, and taken theirs, with which I took some, tho they were with my Tackling no wifer then before. I folemnly protest, all the Craft I used to succeed better then they, was only due observation of the depth of the mater, and absconding my self from fight, with advantage of Sun and VV ind, 'tis true, my Tackling is generally finer then most used in our Rivers, nbo are afraid of breaking a Line or loofing a Hook,

by

The Preface.

by reason of the great obstruction of Eushes and Rotten Trees at the bottom: Tho in such places I. commonly find the best sport, neither have they the knowledge, or elfe are negligent to lengthen. or (horten their float according to the depth of water, beside they'd make one Hook to serve for all Fish, which is meerly ridiculous, with fix or feven bairs to a strand, nay, I have known more; fuch bungling tackle is good for nothing but to frighten the Fish, while I ever use but two or three hairs at most, and if clear may, will hold a Chub of a Foot long. If I am bung on obnoxious Bushes or Stubs under water, I have ways to free my Hook, or if lost, I need not grieve, for I have diways more ready, Experience is the best director and by daily observations.

1, es

5, in n-

ave

er

ny

10 the n-nd

ige

bo ok,

A Man may if stock'd with patience succeed to his wishes, but he must have an extraordinary care to observe the seasons, without which all is but labour in vain, due consideration is to be had to his baits as well as Tackling, which are to be sweet and clean scowr'd, especially VV orms and Gentile, the best Gentils that I know breed from a Dead Cat, if the Angler be nice of his singers, a pair of broad pliers may keep his hands clean, and a few days lying in bran will make them sit for his sport. I use to scowr my VV orms without Fenil or Grass, as most do about me, tho they use them commonly just taken out of the ground, when I first take my worms, I put them into a large earthen Pan, that they may have room to crawl and purge out their earth and slime for about twenty four hours; then I wrap them in a Greasie Dish Clout which bath been used much, but not to salt meat, then I lay clean moist Moss in the bottom of the Pan, with worms in the clout and cover them over with more, in three days they'll begin to eat their way through the clout, and in the Moss scowr themselves, when hungery, they'll return to the clout again to seed, and in a weeks time be sit for use; I kept some three Month's with once a week changing the Clout and Mols.

It is but labour lost to describe the keeping of baits and making of Pastes, wherefore I forbear, only these two [except the fy] I most commonly use, and thought good to shew the way I prepare them, the every one may follow his own fancy ; I have been a Lover of Angling from a child and now above fixty cannot forbear, yet never could attain the Art with a Bow and Arrow to shoot Fish swiming, as I have seen Boys in the West. Indies; I make no question, but some will find fault and I expect it, but when I consider the world affords both wife Men and Fools, and both find equal admirers I am satisfied; as to the verse there is faults and folly enough, but grant Poetical Licence, if in pleasing no body I have pleas'd my self, and that's all the reward I defire.

is equipment? will taken out of the events.

earl and parge but their carth and firme for knywedished Flat, that they may

THE

Charlesters Reviews

cb, ofsout ays ut,

n a ree

ar, mly are and uld loot estfind

th oth

erle etias'd

W

Genteel Recreation:

OR, THE

Aries Richard

ANGLING

Appy's the Man blest with a mode-(rate state, His Grandsires Land devolv'd to (him by fate,

And conftant there remains,
Bound fast by Laws strong Adamantine (chains,

He gently can survey his Meads, and be Speciator of his own felicity;

R

Those

The Genteel Recreation.

Those curious Meads,
New Pleasure breeds,
A purling Brook just by,
Where the Inhabitants
Of all the watery Elements,
Strive nature to out-vie.

Those various Beauties which the Medows (breed,

The watery fry in spangled glory far exceed, While carking cares that do the mind oppress, By Men unwary of their happines:

Clog'd with the burden of Domestick cares,

May here dispel those lingering fears, And learn new Joys, observing of the fry, How they at Natural and Artificial glorys fly.

Puft with conceit, They take the bait,

And by extorted usury die.
While minds fedate, scorn the destroying (pelf,

And value not that all devouring shelf
Of mighty riches.

Thoughts most serene, and Calm the (mind,

No Counter buffs of Fortune blind Their Soul bewitches;

The Heaven thunder, Jove his lightning fend, They're always conflant to their friend,

And with a Heart most pure, The storms of Fortune ever can endure. is bestion of his List

But now I'll fing, how minds opprest by care, Find fundry cures, but this the only rare,

While by a Chrystal brook, With Rod and Line and Hook;

They strive for to surprise,

ed,

d, is,

es,

ly.

ng lf,

he

d.

d.

d,

11.

The Rovers of the watery Element,

Without a bad Intent
Of hoarding up their prize.

No Bags of Gold, for which the Mifers wish,

And dies a Slave unto an empty Dish,

Can them entice
Their pleasure's more,
Then all the store,

That Damn themselves by greedy Avarice.

Joys so supreme an Angler finds, While all the stream he views and therein (minds,

The true content,
Of time well spent,
In placing of his Hooks and Lines.
His several baits he varies both to time and (place.

And thinks it no difgrace; Sometime an eager Fish, Frustrates the long expected wish,

By

The Genteel Recreation.

By breaking of his Line,
Yet he'll not Curse nor Swear,
Like those in passion are:
But wait a more Auspicious time.
For to retrive the secting prey he lost,
And that retaken Glory of the most.

III.

Now with the Tyrant of the Silver stream, I first, kind Mare, will begin my Angling (Theme.

And leave the Salimon fince our streams (afford,

No Habitation for that mighty Lord.
I nothing know, nor nothing say of him,
So leave him to his Pleasure where he'll (swim.

But for the Pike my chiefest love, my care, No pains, no cost, I willingly would spare,

For his vocacious Appetite;
Enkindles fervour to a fresh delight.
When fair Aurora, leaves her dark Cavern,
And Sol's uprising first I can discern,
Shaking the moisture from his dew'y locks,
To set a Lusture on a Thousand Lady Smocks.
Enameling the Medows fair and bright,
But suft reliv'd from the terrours of the (night, be Genteel Recreation. I march along, and with a dainty taper Pole Of nine foot long or more I make my troul, With Curious Rings fixt fo to ply, And humour him my skilful Enemy. First from the Brook I take. A Gudgeon, Roach or Chevin for my bait. Which fuddenly I then empail. Upon my hook and fixing tie his tail; My hook well arm'd with wyer ftrong And commonly eight Inches long. I to my Swivel fix, that fo my line, From fleeting reel may give him his due time. The next care then must be to find his haunt. As well as to provide him his Provinc Tho he's not squeemish, all he sees Without distinction will his fancy please, Except his Brother Ferch. 201 and Whose sharpned Javelins he disdains to touch, Well knowing with a Timorous care. His end approaches if enfoared there, no of So where two Rivers meet. And Loving Greams each other greet. Then boldly shoot in one, Against that stream he certain lies,

ıg

e, ns d,

11

1.

And Pirate like waits to ferprife, The Merchant failing on : Or, see neer to a hollow bank, (Shade_ Where subjects of the watery Kingdoms (made

Them

the Genteel Recreation.

Them fure recesses, when the storms grow (high,

Their constant harbours to the scaly fry.

There begin,

And by an even throw. Strive to deceive the Fishes mortal foe.

Just to the brim,

Retrive the finking Roach, With gentle stirring then he will approach, With eager hast to taste the Loved prey, And Tyrant like take all, then turn away, Then give him line and let the reel fo be.

From knots and fnarl's exceeding free, He'll quickly drown himself in his Debauend in dimontal and (chery:

Yet to my forrow I but lately found, One took my bait and stoutly stood his (ground.

While I expected he should run or fly, The only certain fign to fing his obsequie:

But he grown cunning, Left his runing, Should himself destroy, Spit forth the bait, And made a fafe retreat, That baulk'd my much expected Joy 2 m 0 200 2 (5 2) 10

IV.

In Surry Rifes there,
A branch of Medway, where Store of all forts of Fish do breed,
To serve for Pleasure and for need,
Well stor'd with Game the Rivers be,
Could they from poaching be kept free:
Once Angling at the Rivers side,

Observing how the stream In gentle motions then did slide, With eager haste to meet his bride,

And make his Joys supream;

By chance I spy'd a Rustick Clown,*

A halling something up and down,

To him I streight repair, And ask'd his business there.

He told me Fishing for an hour or two, Lord, how amaz'd was I to see him go, A bush pul'd from the hedg, his Angling rod No top, but like a staff with which Men plod, When driving home full udders to the pail, Heaven bless me when such tackling can pre-

leff sledw w

^{*} Farvice Hilis.

His hook ti'd to a string, that to a piece of (leather,

A flote just in the place where both were (knit together,

Fortune her felf that time was double blind, She could not see and so perforce was kind.

For firaight he took two Bleats, one

And last of all a well grown Perch,
Who gasping lay upon the ground,
I Judged to weigh at least a pound.
Pleas'd with the fancy I unto him gave,

An Angle, Rod and Line the best I have,

And shew'd him where good baits to

A Cow-turd, ten days old, and newly lin'd, With blem-tails which from homed Gentiles (spring,

A ready bait and good for every thing,
The Man was Civil, and exprest his mind,
In real thanks, then fought some better luck (to find.

At Eaten Bridge we may at first begin,
To Trans or Angle which the Angler will,
O're pleasant Medows which the eye invite,
* To De la-ware, whose Prospect gives (delight

^{*} Mr. Heury Streatfields.

The Genteel Recreation.

of

T,

re

r, ne

ch.

to

nd

d, iles

ag,

ick

nd.

ill,

ite.

ves

ht

ind-

Surrounding Rivers sometime over-flow. And wash the Walls of that most Antient (Fabrick fo As if they Homage paid to Streatfields And tendred without trouble their abound-(ing Game. Pike, Pearch and Roach, the greedy Chub With feveral others Men Ingenious feek, That use the Angle or Laborious Tropl Morning or Night the Fiftes to Cajole, And ther's a Fift peculiar to that place. If Jove wou'd Angle 'twould his God-head (grace : Roach-like he's made his scales of burnish'd That shine like Mettle from Pattolus Roll'd. Nameles he is, till some more froitful Pen. Describes his wonderous make, like Adam Baptizing Creatures with . Immortal The Glory of great Medway and more Silver From thence o'r verdent Meads, (Thames. Our Joys fapream exceeds. * When Heaver Castle to our eye.

Congratulates our coming nigh.

*Mr. William Spreatfield.

to The Genteel Recreation.
Where I full often have most wellow	me
To him who is my friend, and thinks it	en,
To him who is my friend, and thinks it	s a
If we neglect his Cider and March Be	er.
His most obliging Company and che	ar:
Anglers are wellcome still to his	m,
A Rummer filld unto the Brim.
Shews Bounty still confin'd within	nis
Till Love and Liquor brings a Deluge o'	c us
No thanks he'll have, (a	ıll:
His Soul is brave.	2.19
Ah! Streatfield, thee I will Imbrace In Bonds of Friendship, time ca	٥, ا
Thee from my mind, nor from thy Call	tle-
We him tibe Marrie from D. A. s. M. W.	all
where Natures Blennes are abound	Ing
To Chidding-stone, two Miles or more, (We Angle may, or then give o'r,	au.
If that the Sun decline sixing
Tho many times within the Night	,
The Fish will eagerly and greedy bite,	3
And make our pleasure all Divine Penburst, thy stream's too Rapid and For me to Angle in, (lar
My time ill spent I there discharge	,
And neither loofe nor win.
At Leigh, I know fresh pastime to persue,	4507.7979
Whom D	\nd

I

In Br

ne

n,

a 1,

r,

r:

١,

is 11, us

1:

ise

e-11,

ng

00 ge,

And there all day till Night,
I reap a double sweet delight;
In thy Meanders among the watery crew, Tunbridge comes next and stor'd with Poach(ers plenty,
I arge is the freem of Fish yet almost Large is thy stream, of Fish yet almost Large Nets the game do so destroy, (empty.

That with an Angle few we can decoy;

But here perforce I must give o'r,
A stranger I'm unto the Neighbouring shore,
The Current's strong and swiftly speeds,
By Divers turnings through the Meads

To Maidstone.

Where Oyster Ketches they in plenty ply, And other Vessels twice as big or nigh,

Are coming home

From Rochester, where with the Medway she, Most kindly meets and both fall in the Sea.

Muse sing now the Trout, with all his

His haunts, his motion and his fudden starts, Whene'er a curious fly drops in the stream Make him thy choice and chuse him for thy

The off-spring of the fair Darwent, In thousand pleasing Ruptures see him rise, With Murmuring pleasures to our Ears and To force himself a vent, (Eyes;

In gentle Numbers first he seems to go, But with united forces will o'erslow

2 His

And all the Neighbouring grounds,
That lye below.

* Old Crockbam Street, where first he makes (his way,

To view Sol's Glory and his brighter ray, The Joyful Ishe of approaching day,

He runs not far before he meets, Fair Squries Nymphs and kindly greets;

Three Sifter Ponds well ftor'd with fry,

The Eternal bounties of the sky, Encreasing more with ftronger force,

To Westerbam Town he bends his course, Then visits Valence stony ground,

And in Meanders hurls himself quite round To Braiseed.

At Sundridg pent in narrower room, He gets more strength at length to roam.

To Cheapfteed.

Where first begins the sporting prize,
Angler beware, for he's precise,
And knows his time to sink or rise:

If weather's fair and faltrey hot,
Your labour's vain and nothing to be got,

Unless a gentle Breez, (Trees; Blow Neighbouring flys from off the taller Which to your hook and fingle hair, which Judicious eye and special care.

^{*} At Mr. Tollers.

Angler tread foft, for if the ground By ruder feet make any found; Then void is all your care,

As well as if you ftood too near :

Which to prevent no hadow should emoe Nor you to fee, (nigh,

Where Fishes be, in the stand and

Into the waters pry , and on a gally and y.

e, e, t,

W

r

Keep the Sun constant in your face, Reflections on the water less will be,

So you'll have pleafure to embrace. While others look by their simplicity.

Cheapseed. I'd love thee could'it thou always

From Knaves and Peachers ever free (be, Then thy fweet stream would multiply : To Longford then where first the worm we

For thele two baits I only always ofe; (ofe, For Minnows none we have, nor none are

Chight For better sport should Treets our worms basho mort visusalishar or (deny.) And never rife at Natural or at Artificial Then fometime in a dusky evening late? A grey Snail from the ground I take.

And gently o'c the fiream I troul. Tis fafe, 'tis fure to try with all,

If but some Rain the day before did fall, For Muddy streams a little vext. With falling showers decoy him best :

Or.

Or, to take a Beetle always brown,
That Boys from off the Apple Trees knock (down,

Which in an Evening late when all the Stars, To Heavens black Cannopy withdraws.

You may be fure good sport to find, If but the following precepts well you mind, Four Wings he has, two scaly, two of softest

But with his tail your largest hook encrown; Ne'r hurt him, all his Wings he will expand, And Sing a Murmuring Tune the Trouts can (understand.)

Who greedy of so sweet a prey, Leap straight and bear the Songster quite (away.

When with a fudden touch I feel him rove, I foon injoy my wishes and my Love, Try this but once, you'll quickly find it true, And neatly after this same slight persue. But let no noise the wary Trout offend, By stiring ground or reeds, lest vain your (wishes end.

* Now thro' the Moore's I take my way, And filent fearch o'r Stones and Clay, Which way the stream conducts me in my (play:

a participate was property and believe mowered

^{*} Mr. Farnabys.

A well fcour'd Lobworm now I only use, Which eager Trouts but seldom will refuse, But use no slote to tell you when they bite, The very thoughts of such a thing will fright

The wary Trout,
Yet I'll resolve the doubt,
How by a certain way,

He'll yield himself and so become your prey: Let lead sufficient but your worm to sink, Drive gently with the stream I'th midle or (the brink,

To hinder all and spoil your play;
But with a steady hand your Rod and Line (so keep,

That nothing but the ground your bait should For if the Line upon the surface lies, (sweep. The Angler with his Tools is little wife:

He'll miss his prey, Thro' his uncertain way, The Trout is still so shie.

He Angle may, Ten hours a day,

And never make one dye:
If once you feel him bite,
At Morning or at Night,
With leasure let him run,

Or else your Joys are Baulk'd by loosing half (your worm,

Which

Which to prevent, give time to Gorge the bait,

And by a gentle touch you'll hook him

Down thro' the Moores to Otford gently go, Inviting pleasures still attend you, so

To Shorbam, where use your skill and choicest

And never doubt for pleasure most abound-(ing there.

At twenty places where the River turns, Is sport sufficient both for sly and worms:

* At Lulling stone, and Farningham,

The Trouts are kind and yield good If with judicious eye and steady hand, (game, Your Rod and Line you can command, When Dartford, first comes to your eye, Pack up your Tools and homeward For sweet Darent by going thither, (high, Flows into Thames and runs the Lord knows

Now fing the Carp and turn thy theam my

To fresh delights, (Muse, And conning slights, That skillful Anglers use.

H

^{*} Percivall Hart, Efq;

This Fish takes no delight in Rivers much to (be, nt.

he it,

im

eft

e, dre.

od

ne,

re.

rd gh.

WS

er.

ny

ſe,

iat

But pent in Ponds injoys a sweet Captivity,
Well stored with such our Kentish grounds

(they are,

And Suffex too yields some exceeding rare; For there I know a little Brook which runs, First with a gentle stream then silent turns Into a mighty Pond, and sinding there a stay, Bemoans himself to have a freer way,

Like to a dying Stag at Bay;

There's Carps the glory of the Land, some be Thirty Inches long excepting three.

And weighty too when brought unto the (ground,

Each Carp if large, may weigh at least five

When Sel's bright rays began for to decline, A Lovely Evening and a constant fign,

* A Reverend Matron with a Hook and

Had nick'd the most auspicious time:
Silent she goes and takes a shady stand,
Watchful her eye and steady was her hand,
For well she knew them both for to command.

A worm well fcour'd without the help of ^{*} Mrs. Burges, of Withybam.

That was her bait and that was best by far, The to my cost I've try'd and certain know, That Tarr's strong stench hath little here to

But kill the worm, but I confess that Fishes.
Or that my apprehension is but ill, (smell,
For I have seen them to my flote and Lead (repair,

And gently touch them with infulting care. Nice be their Palats, and their fense exceed-(ing rare,

Then by a sudden turn the bait they spie, They smell and swallow and exclaiming dye;

Bless me I had forgot,
This Tarr disturbs my mind,
My Matron at the Fishing Plot,

That is to Anglers kind,
Before the Glorious Sun went down,
Returning was the plodding clown,
To sweet repose,

But she packs up her Tools and homeward Well Laden with a Brace or more (goes,

The just expence of but one only hour;

Fraught with her luck some new designs, Cans d me next morn to rise betimes, Fore Sol had left his watery couch,

* A friend had lately given to me a strand,

^{*} Mr. Nathaniell Rosewell.

And for its frength exceedingly commend, - Unhappy when it first came to our land;

Or 1, to pitch upon that Line, To Angle with at that unlackey time, No fooner was compleat my Fishing Geer, But that I chanc'd to fpie unto mesteer.

Two Carps that were of mighty fize, My heart e'n leapt to make of one a prize; As they came Sailing careless on their way, A well scour'd worm I in their course convay.

The water there not two foot deep, Besides so clear.

That all their motions plainly did appear, Behind a shady Oak conceal'd I stood, And with a wary eye observ'd the flood,

And all their motions as they mov'd,
Thus while they nearer drew,
My hopes I still renew,
They'd sible at my being

They'd nible at my bait, Tho after curse me for my sly deceit;

And quickly plainly cou'd descry,
That one had something pleasing to his eye,
He seem'd to smile and with expanded Jaws,
Hug'd his good luck and silent gave Applause.
Till with a gentle touch I hook'd him (streight,

While he stood wondring whence should (come deceir,

5.

s,

nd

⁺ Indian Grafs.

Under the Luster of so fair a bait : He never feem'd, or fcorn'd to run, But with a sudden yerk his tail did turn, And then as fuddenly my Joys were gone, For my new strand gave way and broke, But what's become of worm and hook,

For both I'm fure he fairly took.

Vext, no we Anglers often loofe our prize, Compleat let all our Tackling be and most (precise,

For Fishes prove sometimes more wise then As by this late ensample all may fee,

That Lovers of the Angle be : Immediately I left that stand, No speech in Fishes be.

Yet one another they can understand, With fure dexterity.

Then for the imaller fry I made my way, The scream and Pond affording every day, Chub, Roach, and Perch and Jacks in plenty be, To give delight and fill necessity.

Then Cadbaits from the fand 1 get. Or Antflys which the Roach Intirely Love,

And lay my worms alide. Sometime with Gentles I did bait, My Treacherous hook and hide The barb with wings expanded of a fly, V When eager Roaches mounted up above,

To view the glorys of the sky: With fuch like tricks as thefe one day,

One

One Hundred Forty odd I made my prey, One Hook, one Line, one Angle Rod,

One Mile was all the ground I trod,

I fcorn deceit,

۲,

e.

ost ise,

nen we,

be,

ay,

That those who please hereafter for to try, With these same baits may well succeed as I, Yet some there be that talk of Tar and Pitch, And filly Oyles the Fishes to bewitch:
They're all unworthy of my love or care.
Begon, begon, all nasty drugs, forbear
My Muse to sing, but for the Carp a dainty (worm and red.

WillRonse him from the bottom of his flaggy Which when he takes and neatly hung, (bed,

Your skill requires, your tackle strong,
For out he shoots like Arrow from a bow,
As, far as Line and Rod permits him go:
Yet turn him if you can, within the bent of (Rod to roam,

And then a Landing Net will fafely bring (him home.

Suffex I leave thee, and to Kent repair,
Where Ponds are large and waters ever clear,
Full flowing streams, and Carps in plenty be,
The hopeful issue to Posterity;

Three Sifter Ponds of which I whilome told, Grac'd by most curious walks on dainty mould ^{} Sir Nicolas Crifps, at Squirres.

Prepetual Springs which fweetly bubling rife,

Like Niobes distilling pearly eyes ;

Then the square Pond or Fountain rather,

A Mermaid always sprouting ont the water.

Where as it falls the Fishes seem to play, with

Till time or fate conveys the stream away.

* Boreplace a seat of my beloved Friend,

Whose Ponds have streams on which a Mill (attend,

Least overflowing streams the Corn offend,
A Fountain too there is well stor'd with fish,
And ready always for a friendly dish,
If that grow empty then he can Recruit,
By fetching from his Houses top sweet fruit;
I mean large Carps that in a Pond there be,
The product of his Ingenuity.

And twenty more the County can afford, But I'm a stranger to those fish and them, So leave them to a more propitious Pen, Yet if I Listed, I could Hundreds show,

Of Ponds have Carps, but muddy grow Where I good store have often tane,

A sweet requital for my time and pain.

Observe their season, nick the time aright,

And baits that most they love to bite.

⁺ Tho. Knight, Esq; * Mr. John Hide, at Sundridg. + Henry Fane, Esq;

Free from their spawning then they fickly be, And flight all baits, for nothing will agree, Where Law and Nature hates by simpathy. Muse sing the Fishes Asculapius, and he Thy next of Themes a Soveraign King most Beloved of all without an enemy; (free, None Challenge his Perogative, Nor none he feeks for to enflave, But with a kind dispensing power,.

Diffuses virtue every hour.

T

Re

11

d, ree

Hail great Physician of the watry Element.
Had Nature more propitious been,
And given thee liberty to vent,

Thy virtue unto Fishes in the Rivers be,
Then thy eternal golden fin,
Might Challenge the fole Soveranity, O'er watery Kingdoms and Immortal be,
Like those Diviner Fishes which in Heaven are;
Choice Constellations of the Beatitude most

The mighty Salmon and voratious Pike, (fair: Declining grown to thee they feek,

And Languishingly implore,

That thy Diviner help, decayed Nature (would reftore)

Flows from thy vertue, their defence. Is justly due unto thy care.

When lingering Age, or Siekness brings (them to dispair

But

But how can Mortals tell, or which way, (can descry, Those Soveraign Balsams in what Cells they For to refund, (lie.

And by a God-like power,

Mans vain Immaginations to confound,

Paft all his fearch for to discover;

Anatomists there are who undertake,

To search out Nature and all causes make,

From occult qualities and well they may,

Like Owls be blind in an uncertain way,

Should they diffect thee in great Netura

Should they diffect thee in great Neptun's (publick Hall.

And read a Lecture to the Fishes all.

As on a Malefactor.

Ten Thousand Crabed Names they'd soon Yet never can thy Cabbinet disclose, (dispose, With Glory to succeeding Ages after, Where thy most precious Essence is prepared, Nor in what certain Repository stored:

But there it is where Nature first ordain'd,

And there it will remain, Phylician-like all Patients to attend.

Till cured, then reap Immortal fame, Who eager then would be for to destroy (thy breed.

Injustice fore, yet justly may succeed,
When Numerous swarms encrease and mul(tiply,

That there's no Room for the Ignoble fry,

But

ay

y, ey

ie.

11, on ſe,

1, oy

ed,

ully,

3ut

But with expanded fyn's they fullen dye. (Mich to prevent, b'ioff villegven Angling fent, DiliW That by Ingenious strife, Decoying some, we give the rest a longer life. Tis pity) for to part the Carp and he, Since muddy Ponds with both do well agree; in snor d'One bait doth both delight. and rathA worm that's red and bright has or Excells a Thousand trifling things, That bungling Anglers to small purpose To foare the Fift away : Both yield sweet pleasure, both delight, The both contrary ways do bite, vieroil ciAnd and play, and Tractight, Curp's eager gape and draw the flote down-Then when he's hung he runs with all his Nor water beats he with his tail, (might, Till life and ftrength together fail; The Tench he only gently fucks the worm, And feveral ways the floting flote will turn, Until the hook within his Jaws doth lie, Angler forbear, for that once done to th' (reeds he'll-ply, Thinking his prey for to fecure and speedy

One gentle touch he'll beat the water with Imploring help, no help can then prevail, Untels your strand or line give way, And fo by eager hafte become the Fifthes prey.

Thus

* Thus lately by a pleasant Pond I Angling (stood, With Carp and Tench indifferently stor'd, My hour was late and little time to stay, Yet rook four brace then homeward made (my way. Muse now raise thy fancy once again, And sing the Eele and where he doth remain, That yields no pleasure all the Winter long, But keeps in muddy holds most fure and

Till Sol's bright rays the waters gently heat, For then he looks abroad and leaves his fafe

Contrary to all Creatures else in stormy (weather.

He leaves his hold and flys the Lord knows (whether:

+ For I have feen a Pond without a Flag or (Reed,

Or any Bush for shelter, where no Fishes breed. To Man's Imagination, on a Common large, When Jove his thunder first began discharge, With stash'y lightning, mighty Peals did rend,

The welkin so, That Travellers refused to go, Unto their Journeys end:

By what preposterous Action or what canse, A sudden trembling to the Earth withdraws, lo

A

W

Y

CI

A

N

TI

Sp

A٦

Fo

Do

'M

^{*} The Lady James, at Ightham. + On a Common near Crayden.

And Eeles in mighty number the furface foon Incumber in that horrid Afternoon: Angler now tell me if you had been there, What bait you'd wie while Fishes lay so fair, All in your eye upon the Waters top

Not daring to descend, Having no fielter nor no Friend. Their tottering Kingdom to defend, From the encroaching fop. (a bait, Yet now I'll tell how they were ta'ne without Clowns they Conspire, Conspiring ferch a

And with that Ruftick Tool some hundreds Some large and over-grown, (take: That long had liv'd yet dy'd too foon,

In fuch prepofterous way, I never knew before, and Heaven grant I ne-I won't relate the feveral ways they're ta'ne,

By bobbing or by Pots, that's vain, But to my Theme of Angling keep, In Rivers or in Ponds that's deep,

Nor shall the fundry ways diffurb my sleep. Tho by the River many a Night have I Spent in Contemplating Heaven, and the endant be bis Tail (Starry Cannopy.

And with the patience of an Am'rous Maid. For my expected Joy I filent stay'd,

Down at the bottom there he constant lies, 'Mong Mud and Flags and Roots of rotten coes at that ti glide netwicen your hands and

ed) de andirec ; see (be nd

JUE

VS,

non

g I,

١,

e

y.

0, So id

g, t, fe

t.

ny

Τ,

NS

or

d,

d.

e.

ge,

id.

Or at the fluces where the waters fall, Which stop to erslow the Bancks and Meads.

The Neighbouring grounds below and all there he's mile then so the Bridges go. 1

And hear the pass that prop them up, His usual time is late at blight to sup. On what the stream into his way conveys, For Eister dead become his constant preys;

The darkest Nights, if those you chuse, And such kind Angler, acer resule, with Line that's strong, and strong your You'll hardly miss his dark abode, (Rod.) For Night's his everlasting time,? From ten to twelve the only prime.

A Puckle Herring from will bring him too, on Or little Fifth, in them he'll much delight, and And swallow all and hardly ever bite (play, Amis when hung, ne'er stand to give him For much he'll strive your ine for to convey, Among such study or roots in Rivers be.

Then Angles you are loss by your simplicity, I

Rear up his head and Pendant be his Tail,

In Thousand Gembol's with directly shoot, and Spice of your Teeth be'll brake your trand

And rend his throat in pieces at that time. So flipery he'll glide between your hands and Like Gig as ring, Invisible and free; (be, But But rowl him on the fand his friength is gone, and justify then you call him may your own. I

How Eads are taken which full well I know, But I'll for bear land only now relate, who had had How they are taken without a line or bait y it. I No Eele-Pors, now no Nets, but Shored and and Creating Pleasure, if Pleasures be at all. (Awl

Goes like a Palinh of headrof raigning air and White Madam, shalar won I ashwaA he Play

Have Patience yet a while

And I'll declare it fireight. A vol.

At Orpington fome bubbling flouts there rile, V
No biger then the Pearls fall from our eyes,

(When fome dear Friend is lately dead and (gone.

At whose lamented obsequées we mourn) While Mulaphing more on fittle way.
They make a fiream, that glides into the Sea.
So shallow every stone is plainly told,

Pattolus with her Glitring streams of Gold, Can't hew such treasure, and what's more, Ther's Trouts, and Eeles a mighty store. A But to the purpose, how these Eeles are ta'ne.

Requires fome time as well as pain.

And rous by Foots-Cray and to North Cray

Where the sport begins, (besides;

When Heaven's fo dark that nothing

Lest

194 ur

del

y, m y,

YLI

E.

bi

e,

ut

^{*} Major Bugings, at North-Cray.

But its black Cannopy extending fair,
Throws an Eternal Sable thro' the Air:
Then from their watery Burroughs Eeles (refort,

And leave the fafety of the Liquid Court.

Like Lovers, in the dark they are most kind,
And sweetly meet, new blisses by Injoying
A Rustick with a Flambeau in his hand, (find.
Goes like a Page of Honour thro' the Strand,
When Madam she's retiring from the Play

Cloy'd with vain repetitions and an idle sport.
Vain is that pleasure yields us no delight,
But dulls our over clouded Appetite.
Resume thy theme, the Flambeau glistering

(bright, The wandering Eeles are dazel'd at the light,

And, like to Boys admiring, grow
Bold at a Lord Mayors Pageant show:
They nearer draw, and still the glittering fire;
As he walks up and down, appland, admire,
He warily knows how to pick and chuse,
And neatly can his skillful shovel use;
For when the larger fort comes in his way,
Down goes the shovel, and he's forc'd to stay Till with the Awl they him to Land convey.
Now see sweet Maro, of the Pearch I sing,
And Dedicate to thee, who art the Muses
My solemn Theme; (King,

Recorder of the Ads of Gods and Men.

n Majar Ingings, at North Corn.

Lest that my trembling Pen in vain estay,

Ignis Fatuus-like, lost in uncertain way.

Had I thy Genius, then my quill should raise,
Immortal Glory to thy Name with praise.

While thou, blest Hero, to the Gods conjoyn'd,
And, by eternal Love, to Man Combin'd,
shews us the Paths of virtue how to tread,
And Magnify the Glory of the Dead.

boo aid a For thou alone will feel aid assisted and boas Hast further gone,
In thine Immortal lays,

Then all the scribling Poets in our last declin-Choice is my Theme, (ing days,

The Vice Roy of the stream,
That now I mean declare,
And his abiding place,

No Lofty Turrets do his Palace grace, Yet he delights in Silver streams most fair.

A gentle current and a fandy ground,

With curious Pebles that abound, Are his Eternal way,

For o'er the stream he ranges still, And, Glutton-like, his stomach seeks to fill;

Then to a bush convey
His Porcupine and bristly back,
That with an Eager sierce attack,
Whole sholes are forced to give him way.

Like winking Cat, he'll feem afleep,
Till fome bold Minnow, or the smaller fry;
Insult about him, then he'll quickly ply

Against a Million all he will withstand. Till formenipour Captive stays his furious Remorfeles, he ne'er fears, nor prays,

But all he conquers, he as fudden flays

His Pallion's hot, and feldom cool Till taken with a Gin by fome laborious fool: Yet, like a Turk, in all extreams looks high, Shakes his fharp Javelin, Blafphemes his God and dves.

* In Suffolk there I know a stream, Where it begins l'Ignorant am, But for'd it is with spacious fry

Of different forts; what there I've ta'ne, Of those I'll sing, and let the rest remain Till some more Carions, with more skill firety do his Polace crate then I.

Their mighty numbers fairly can descry, And from what Fountain first The fruitful waters burft.

That daily pay a tribute to the Sea. Are Theams too high; and fo unknown to me. But there kind Fortune once to me was kind. That, for one year, I nothing had to mind,

But pleasure by that River side. Where still, with all my Heart, I willingly (could abide :

Such store it yields as I before ne'er knew. And daily did my Lov'd delights renew.

^{*} Highen, and Strafford, by Denbam,

For Angling from a Child I still do prise,
The best of pleasures, for the grave and wise.
Oh! Who can tell the store of Pikes are there?
Twelve, Sixteen Pound of Fish, repays the (Anglers care, ons

id.

4 ı, od

es.

ne.

dill

1.

ne.

M.

ely

And all the bait he needeth for't,
Is but a Gudgeon, of the largest fort,
Or else a Roach, fixt to the Trouling Line,
With observation of his feeding time.
I have admir'd to see, the hooks were double.
The Trouler please himself with needless

A mighty Pole, Line like a Cable Rope

They were no Artists, little skill they had, Saving to Curse and Swear, like Bedlams, mad When a stout Pike from their rude hands (made way)

And joyful glides along the stream to play. The Proverb is forgot, no Anglers ought to

The least of Oaths the Fishes soon will scare, And Imprecations too make them the bait (forbear.

But I forget my Theam, my Angling for the

And flight the Gudgeon, Chub, the Bream and (Routh:

as we seem to the

Supplys

1000	M. A. C.	293344	Bettenti		i i
			" "
upplys	the its	cam wit	new rec	ruits each
Min's	21127313	19/17/201	a its sour	(hour;
for th	ere's In	cho plent	y, Heave	ns Eternal	5
1111 av	7 20 41	if to the	WEST-DOSSE	(Power,	-
For ev	ery Ever	ning all t	he Summer	long,	9.0
			tempty ho
And ft	ill speat	but few l	ours at a t	ime.
				nly prime,
				earch, and
	400	A COLUMN TO THE REAL PROPERTY OF THE PARTY O		(more;
I had	deferov'd			ny more :
			ok and Li		- (decoy;
Nors				he Fishes to d fome of (Bream.

And other Fish inhabit in the stream. But ftill the Pearch was beft. And always him I fought most to molest. When Ruftick People they have any time,

To Fishing streight they go, And hardly either Sup or Dine, Without a brace or two. But to observe these Rusticks Tools, The World might well pronounce them

(Fools Nay Fools in Grain, but still such luck most

As Fortune fends to those are Mad or Brave, For with a Hook ty'd to a Pack-thread Line, They'll take you, fome times, twenty at a (time:

Their

Their Rod, a Goad, or fome such foolish A fit Companion for their home foun ftring. Their bait, a worm that's large, in funder For little things these kind wife Acres Scorn, They'd never Angle in the middle of the (ftream. But near the Banck, 'mong bushes most (extream, And if the bushes hong them in their play, Their Line was ferong to bring them still I oft have been Amaz'd to fee The very Boys grow wife, At their Old Fathers great simplicity. One evening, Sol declining grown, My Tools packt up, and I returning home, I chanc'd in shallow water fpy A Lusty well grown fack to lye, So fready that you'd think Him Dead to flote fo near the brink : I view'd him long, and wondred much to fee

He'd make no motion, at my shade, nor me;

And, by ill Fortune, at that time I had no Troul nor Trouling Line; He lay too far for me to mare,

And I had none but Lines were made of hair. Yet was refolv'd to have fome sport;

With that front Tyrant of the Liquid Court; A Roach alive I fixt, to bear Upon a Line, and drew it near,

a

His mighty and expanded Jaws,
Like Hells wide mouth, immediately disclose
Whole rows of Teeth, as Cadmus earth born
Each other view, (Sons

Then furious flew.

As from the ground they sprung by turns.

Lord how I wondred, when the Roach went in That yawning Gulph, and could no further

That dark Abbis (swim:

His last recess

Was the Eternal end of him.

Fain would I more have feen and known, For observation seldom comes too soon; But he, Tyrant-like, shew'd me the Tyrants (play,

Turn'd his large head, and with the stream (slid quite a way.

Angler don't think I Equivocate or lie,
The truth I hear declare and the whole mister for with a Worm, or else a Minnow small, (ry,
Those Fifteen Hundred Pearch I took them all.
Cloy'd with my pleasure, still my cares

And Angling, all my Joys, I daily still pursue Till Winter came, and Borew's stabborn wind, With flakes of Snow and Ice, the earth and

Like Twins, that from one womb the both

Have different virtues at their different need. For when the River's froze as hard as stone, And all the Fishes, there Imprison'd, mourn;

An

Another game I us'd to find, (kind Where Duck and Mallard multiply'd their And fince my sport of Angling was debar'd, Something I'd have, or elfe I thought it hard;

One Element just turn d to stone, If that the other could afford me none:

All forts of Wild Fowl Heaven feat me this

I neer Examined whence they came, nor go

For if in fixty yards, or little more collected Whether in the Air, or on the shore,

I little car'd, all one it was to me,
If with advantage then I could deliver free.
Some forces of Wild Fowl there I fairly that,
Some for the Spit, and some were for the Port
Of some I presents made unto my Friends.

No Nigards mind, nor Mifers with on me

Angler had you been there you'd far'd as well

For Heavens bounty, Heaven be prais'd Eter-

Now the Eager and voracious Chub rehearse, That mounts the water, sees the universe,

And hides his daring head beneath the flouds, Till some new object makes him rife,

Ment dele things bat from his light fram hed Ture he lees, and Fifther well can bean,

Kon

e n

n

.

I,

3

n è

, e ., 1

l,

9

38 . The Genteel Recreation. Then nimbly down he'll dive, and with his prey, Duck and Michael malifply d their Obscure himself from Sal's most Giorious ray. bred ti Hoder a shady Oak 1 1 pointsman His motions common look For there he'll rife and fall, as in in W As often as convenient Beanties call; Ob If shadows do approach him, then he's fly, And fluns the Alterations of the sky. But when Senene and Calm, in Rivers large, Hi He joyfelly exerts his force, and charge TA AT Battalions of the Buzzing Excrements, On whom his spiteful Choler daily vents Lik A fresh revenge; Till with a counting hand, and baited hook, His pride ftrikes Sail, as being foon miltook, W So greedy Wolves who after Midnight range, An Fall in a Bit-fall and their lives exchange. All Vain Pride by accidental chances come of Sal Unto a Period, and the everlasting Sun Climb's higher fill, till Climbing throws If (him down, 8 Be And in a Sable Vails the Immortal Crown Fo Of Light, ¥ I Now the Laser smad Theme, and toll worle The Chibs are then : And The Eternal Gormandizers A Gentle or a Worm, fometimes he'll take And feldom e'er refuse the bait, He Of verdant finging Hoppers, ago (elear, And other things; but from his light stand For fore he fees, and Fifbes well can bear, For

For fight, or noise, and the Are no decoys, de

Which to prevent, act by judicious care, and Observe the wind, and how you best may bear?

The floating fly, the plane and

The floating fly, do yel sono sud In places nigher and soul od T

S

His haunts, for shady shelters his delight,

A Cadice then, or Worm that's red, (bite, I Like the voluptions, brings him to a dying Excess is hurtful none admire, and (bed):

Those Damps extinguish natural fire A

Who covet all, but little can injoy, (toy,
And much, to some's, esteem'd the meanest
Alexander conquered all, yet sighing weep't, Saladines victories ended in a shirt. (strong,
Angler, strong Tackling have, for he is

If only for the Chub your Madam's long, Becareful, never trust the single hair,
For that's deceitful, and frustrates your care,

*I Angling lately, for the smaller fry, Two hairs my hook did only tie.

And those two hairs, two score had ta'n,
Till one stout Chub deludes my pain;
I Angled not for him, yet him I did provoke,
He sudden rose and with a Cruel stroke.

^{*} At Heaver Calel, in the Medon,

The easy hair gave way,
While he Triumphs, as Conquerer that day;
It was so sudden, that I scarcely knew,
Whether he rose or from the Clouds he slew,
Like Perseus on his winged Mare,
To bring relief, or Combat in the Air,
That Monster of the great Eternal Seas,
Who Andromeda ready was to seize.

But once by chance in water clear,
The Brook was narrow, and I near,
Close by the Banck a Chub I ey'd,
And wonder how I came fo near unfpy'd,
His Argus eyes, or that hesteeping lay,
To let me filent in his way convey

My bait, which quickly there he spies, And like a Treasure, all his own he crys,

Voracious Natures seldom ever can,
Revoke the principles at first began Instilling Crast, but yet the crasty falls
Like Coblers using Swords instead of Amis.

For by a Touch I hook'd him, then Blaspheming dyes, like to dispairing Men.

Now comes the Roach, against the stream (he'll swim,

And beat the waters with his ruby fin,
Him you may know, if River's ne'er so deep,
For, when he bites, the flote will downwards Perpendicular to the deep Abys, (creep,
If well he's hung, you'll hardly ever miss;
If Large, a little play requires your skill,
And always keep his head above the water

Till

0

B

1

V

E

Till strength is spent, then bring him to the

And always Angle midle deep or more, For he's not nice, a Gentle, Cadice or a Worm, Or, on the top, a fly will ferve his turn, Ant flys are best, for these he'll eager chace, Besides they be a Soveraign bait for Dace; Our stream affords us none, but I know where They do abound, and have been Angling (there,

* At Satbleford, not far from Holy Dee,
A stream abounds, and that most infinitely,
Dace are choice, few other Fish are there, Except some Trouts, but they're not large nor (fair,

Not like unto our Kentish Trouts, these I Are only good and far unto excess, (express

In Dalamore's, a filent Meer,

Good store of Bream increases there;
Broad sides and little mouths, do ill agree,
The he's in biting commonly free. (play,
Oh! Should you see a large one, how he'll
And with his Tail, beat all the waves away,
Scorning so small a hook, and little line,
Should Antidate him in his slowing prime,
Angler, iff you go there, have Tackling (strong,

No Hook, nor Line, you must rely upon, When near the shore, but with a Ner him life. Else his large sides will put him soon a crist.

d F

m m,

,

ds

P, er.

ill

^{*} In Cheshire, + Dalamore Forest, in Cheshire.

Muse sing yet and tell the Roach,
What other bait he will approach,
And let the Bream and Dace alone,
Since our sweet stream affords us none, mony the Flags, if any little place is clear

Among the Flags, if any little place is clear, Or gloomy shades, I common find them there;

Sometimes they're fly, Scarce one will die,

No Worm nor Gentle can them please,

Yet they'll come near, and smell, (well. Then turn their Tails, and bid them all fare-What shall I do, no sport I'm like to have, But drudge all day, yet Fortune helps the brave.

Soon from the River then withdraw, Unto some Farm, and turn the rotten straw. For VVorms, a Ruby head and body white, Are certain signs the Roach at them will bite, Get but a few, you need no more to fear, But you'll have sport if any Roach are there, I feldom find them at this bait precise; And some I've ta'en with other Fishes eyes.

One time my baits were spent,
I thoughtfull was for more.
When Fortune favour'd my Intent,
And soon supply'd my store;
A sudden fancy in my Nodle came,
Which I resolved then to try,
Do you but make experience of the same,
You may succeed as well as I.

The Glaring Oculus, great Loves mifferious (bair, That leads the World in erront, Topiy turns (a flate, Which Monarch's more adore, and brighter

Then all the Glittering stones adorn their (Diadems:

This was my fancy, and I well may fay,
Eyes were my Guide the Fishes to betray,
For some I took, Jove pardon my latent,
To make the blind decoy the Innocent;
Wonder no more, 'tis certain true and just,
Necessity begot Invention first.

-4

ne

e.

N.

e,

ba

Next fing the Gudgeon, where he most abides, The bait he loves, and where he usually (resides;

A stream that's clear, and current pretty

With Sand, or Gravel, will detain him long. Close at the bottom, there he grabling lies, And never looks at Heaven, nor sees the Skys, Till by a Bradling, on the Sun he glares, And ends his life without protesting cares; No Scriviner makes his will, 'tis known to all That commonly the weakest goes to th' wall. Directly 'gainst the stream he bears his head, Stones are his Pillow, Sand his Down'y Bed; And Company he loves, for seldom he's alone: Paternal cares belong to every one.

Angler, if you his haunts would know, Observe the stream, and how the Currents go, In gentle numbers, or most rapid flow, The gentle still belongs unto your care, For there they'll swarm, and recompence you (fair,

Your Brading tail, as you the water found; For he'll ne'er rife, try all the Art you can, To take a bait that's from the ground a span.

A Brading, that's his chiefest Love,
A Gentle, fometimes will him move.
So will the Straw-worm, from his house drawn (clear

Shew you the pleasure that in Rivers are,

Apliant Rod,
No fturdy Goad,
That Ruflick People use,
Gives more delight,
When Gudgeons bite,

Then all their vain Oftentions shews.

A Hook that's fine,

And Taper Line,

Two or three bairs below,

May well fuffice, Unto the wife,

When they to Angling go.
No mighty skill for them you need expend,
If baits be good on those they will arrend;
Increase your sport, and by a fresh desire,
Invite you further on, and then aspire

3

OH

ìr,

7] wn

tr.

To be compleat; who for for Gudgeons Angle; Do oftentimes the best of Fish intangle; Both Chub and Roach, the Pearch and slimy Insensible, unto a norm will steak and estimated And raise your Expectation to a higher pitch. Then floating fry, the volgar so bewitch. But let your baits be always pure and sweet, And all your Tackling of the best compleat, Else falls the Proverb to your lock, and then, Of mighty Artists, prove but simple Men.

Muse keep thy Theme, and sing what

Compleats an Angler to his Roving wish;
And tell those forts that in our streams there

For to repay our cost and pains with usury.

In weather hot, whole sholes are found,
That leave the bottom, and the top surround,
Of silver Bleaks, whose verdant backs

Like Emeralds shine, or finer knacks; Bleaks of a larger fize then those the Thames,

Can boalt in all her Royal streams:

Quite different in taste, the shape is one,
Luxurious far beyond the Gudgeon, (pose,
That River Smelts, do with these Bleaks opLet sense direct you which of them to those.

A little hook, one single hair and sty,
Are helt on top, where Bleaks all open lie,

Drive with the firem.

Bife foon they'll foud and hide chemfelves Caway,

And tedious make the pleasures of the day. Which to prevent, obsconded be, and then You ne'er can fail to take enough of them.

The prey is small, Burthat's not all

An Angler Mould respect; near bay file ways fublime vol a a real state Of an election Exceeding time, Much further can direct. Blenks greedy are.

And to the flys declare

A hatred ends in mortal ftrife, Which Belzebub their God refents.

And thus exclaiming, foon his passion vents Unto his Hell beloved Wife.

My Kingdom will depopulated be, My subjects sent abroad, return no more to

Some newer state I thought might them edocario con marer kinacks

Which they relifting came to handy blows.

Fortune of Wars on Souldier often fall,

' And Honour'd Criples are commanders all ;

But in my Regiments there's none I fee.

That wants a Leg or Arm, but all are free,
Free in their Limbs in Action front,
But few return when they march out,
Some Ambush fore wherein they fall and dies

· For Camibals ne'er breakfast on a fly.

Thus he-

O

Gi

W

Sh T

Im

N

A

A

A

T

Ju

u

Pı

Laft

But when Intelligence was brought, Of numerous foundrons lately gone from (Court And none return'd, except some foraign Gave harbour, they're exil'd for ever more Wonder of Wonders, where the Buzzing (Tribe Should still abscond prepetually, and hide Their Airy Wings, or should Boreus he Imploy them on Plantations to a mistery, None knows; but streight a Counsel orgent (call. And give rewards to those declare it fhat! And pardon too if they accomplice are, Against the winged Buzzers of the Air. This an old Hornet heard, who in a hollow r boars decorate time av a Refted fecure, and fo preferv'd his Liberty, Just on the Rivers banck, for their he cou'd (defery Who 'twas prevail'd, and who destroy'd the by let and (rambling fly. Profound obeyfance to the winged God once Sbem) in my tender Breath papered And Prostrate at his foot-stool, fighing faid : Dread Liege, no hopes of Honours, no re-(ward I crave, By Duty bound, as your most humble flave, I here with forrow can this loss declare, That make's your vast dominions now so ; and) mests a restriction of the away

0 ń

3

How in the waters, like lowus in the Air,
They had forgot the Precept of a Parent (dear,

They firetch their Wings, and spoon afore (the wind,

My Eldeft first, and so the rest behind,

Try all the pleasures of the Silver stream, With Sails Expanded, danger far from them

In all appearance, while they joyful play,

And filent hours decoy the time away.

Pate with conceit, they'd fee the Nymphi

'And how the Gods keep't Court in Caves,

Down to the bottom nimbly dive, and then

Rife and disport themselves with Joys again: While in my tender Breast paternal fears

While in my tender Brealt paternal fears

That sudden Joys have direful ends, which

I loudly call, and bid bold Hornet Stay,

While he forgetful, with the fream kept

And quickly sports his precious life away.

Two

W

E u

St

Hi

TI

W

In W

Te

Two streams there be, from several parts (that come,

Then with united forces joyn in one;

Under a broad and spreading Tree,

C

50

n

e, 1, nt T,

re

d,

m bs

W.

s, fo

en

n: ars

Me,

ich ose ept

ay,

470

' Tree alas, and here begins my mifery,

For like some Pirate in a hollow clif, (drift,

'That waits the careless Merchant when a

'And with full Sails makes to the longed (fhore,

There to unlade, or else to freight him (more;

'Steps boldly forth, and with a fierce fur-

'Makes the full Vessel then his lawless prize.

'So unobserved, by the shady tree

Some Chais expecting lay, a prize to fee,

While my bold Boys, not dreading danger (nigh,

'Fall in a Gulph, and there expiring die.
When this he'd faid, his Aged hair he tore,
Excessive forrow stopt his speach for more.
While Belzebub, new comforts to insuse,
Strives to expel his grief, and clearly shews
His thoughts are free, and solemn doth pro-

The watry Element destroys his happiness. When to remoter climes, the aspiring sive In Numbers swarm, and there surprised dies, Which to prevent, the Counsel all agree, To supplicate great Neptun's Majesty, And by address the Sea-green-God implete, To issue orders to his subjects, o'er

H

The

The Liquid Element, no more for to surprise, When travelling, spontanious buzzing flys. This then resolv'd, the Court a Courier sent, With Lady Birds, the Queen of Hells present, That Neptune may, if so his God-head please, Starve all his Fish, and please himself with Such prefents from the God of flys was rare, Each fauning Courtier fought one for his

When one bold Bleak, more sturdy then

Demanding Audience, thus himfelf exprest.

Hall mighty Neptune, by thy trident I Dare swear, the Jove himself were by,

That these fine Lady Birds, enchanting eyes,

The bane of subjects are but meer decoys,

And to that purpose sent, while we,

For gaudy outlides, are condemn'd to be

Eternal poor, and flaves to misery;

Our Charters broke, and for a Female smile, Expell'd the Limits of our Bounteons life;

This Law, 'gainst reason, Mighty King re-

And add no more oppressions to our Yoke

Which heavy is already, so that we we Expire at once debar'd of Liberty.

Belide, Intruding buzzers, that invade

Your Liquid Kingdom, makes us still afraid

'They are but spies, and seek to undermine,
'Like Faux, your whole Perogative and Line.

٠,

t,

t,

th e.

e,

is

C.

en

A, A.

25,

e,

2

e,

e id

Ie,

16.

nis

This faid, an universal shout attends
The joynt applause of faithful loving friends, While Lady Birds, and Courier home were (sent,

And Fishes still Injoy their own content.

Angler if you besides the fly.

Would other ways or notions try,

Then use a Gentle, when they do abscond
About six foot or more from Land;
Or near the middle, nigh the shore is none
The Sun they Love, and Angle most bout (noon.

For I've observ'd, when that begins decline, Your Angling then is only loss of time.

Besides the Gentle and the Fly,
The Roaches bait I'd wish you try,
And let experience tell you then,
Vain Glory we'er becomes a Fisher-man.

Whose Arches stop't the raging floud.
Whose Arches stop't the raging floud.
When Sun was hot, the water most serene,
And all the fry therein most plainly seen,
While I, absconded by that Lofty hight,
Exceeding pleasure reap't, and pure delight:

For while my Plys, drove gently with the (stream, The mounting Bleaks would still admire at

Then with a sudden spring, new Joys to try, They fall a victime, and lamenting die. The wenter Recreation.

Sing next the trouble of the Angling Rod,
The little Menow, and his blind abode,
That enemy to Angling, when he bites
Destroys our baits, and robs our cheif de-

How to avoid him well we can not tell. In every place in every hole he'll dwell. Confounded Caitif, who can him avoid founded Caitif, who can him avoid

If near the ground, except a Load

Of worms adorn your hook, yet then He'll nible and do all that e'er he can To raise your Passion, yet you must not swear, For frighting other Fishes that are near. All baits he loves, and nothing will deny His Appetite, except it be the Fly, And that must on the water swim, if low, 'Tis certain gone as other baits I know. So little corrs a Mastiff will engage, And, by eternal bauling, make him rage, Who quiet was before, and that until (well Great Madam Spot, thought twas exceeding Her dainty dandlelap, such courage had, To dare a Mastiff till he's mad.

To dare a Mastiss till he's mad.
These Menows dare; and often daring die,
Ignoble Sots deserve no obsequie,
Nor Pity, when most will fully they fall,

Ambitioufly aspiring unto all.

For I have known when Menows had,

By often sucking, made them glad,

And lest the hook near bare,

Without all further care;

By

T

A

Re

T

T

H

u

By one small jerk the hook has been had Fixt in their Bellies, or their fin, (sign Too late then they, like Drunken Fools, de-A quick reform from the entoxicating Vine.

To the heart has founded with A another Invented way, and it is in the special of the heart has founded way, and it is in the special of the

Of Lifes uncertain stay.

Angler, befow some pains, direct my Pen 11.

How to avoid these Plagues which then Requires our cheifest skill and all our care, To make our Recreation supream fair.

I'm at a loss,

The more I think, the further off am I; How to avoid the Inconvenience of these fry; Unless I should confine my self to holes are

Or where the boist rous stream doth sweep
The ground with raging force, for there
They seidom be, and leave our Angling fair;
But I to no such task can be consin'd
While always plodding by the stream, I mind
Their several Meanders, and the ways
To use my various baits, in various Plays.
Sometimes I'm tir'd, and leave my Angle for (my Troul.)

With that I strive some other Fishes to Cajole or make my Enemy to serve my turn, When at a turning stream the Perches come,

And-

And there infulting lye for Menon or elfe

Either will serve if you observe the Rules, No edged Weapons fits the band of Foots, But silent wait, and with expecting care, A Menow soon decoys the best are there, Himself is good for nought, but by Judicious (strife,

Gives greater pleasure to the Patient An-

Life free from cares, and those Tumultuous

That forrow brings, the bane of Mortal (loys:

Eternal enemy to rest and sweet repose;
The Angler may by studious thoughts op-

Refreshment from the Medows sweet.

The Silver streams afford him meat.

What greater Treasure to a friend who'd

Then those which from our labour daily

Labour in vain, the Ingenious do not prize, Pleasure, that profit brings, becomes the wife.

FINIS.

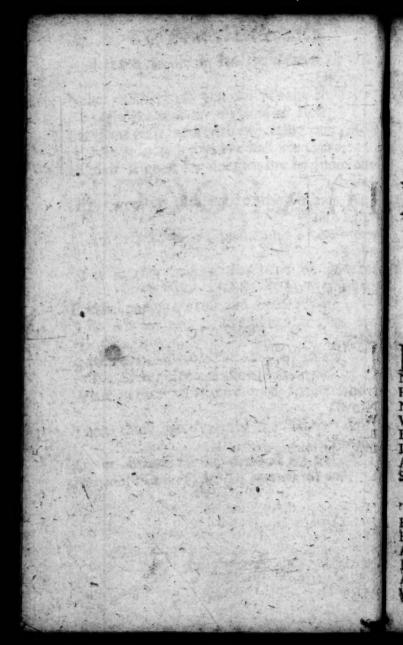

lfe ";

ous fe, nfe. ous bys tal

s; ople.

o'd ag, aily ag,

T

A

DIALOGUE

BETWEEN

Piscator and Corydon.

Coppdon.

If Man immortal be, whose reason's most Divine, 'Tis you must needs Excel, by using well your time. No sooner can the Glorious Sun retire From Thetis lap, and with his Beams inspire, New vigour to the long expecting World, When sable Night hath all his Clouds close furl'd, But you to view Aurora's blushing Face, In dutious manner o'er the Medows trace, And with your Angling Rod, or Trouling Pole, Search all the streams, and there the Fish Cajole.

Tis you that see the Glorys of the Sun,
How he begins his course, and setting down,
How in the Sea he waters his swift steeds,
And cools their fiery mouths in Seagreen beds,
Refreshments, Gods and Men, when cired, love
And in Recesses there sweetly improve,
While Lave with his expanded Charms provokes

The

The Amorous Doves, whom Venus kindly Yokes, And with most Celebrated speed then slys, To Paphos to the Morning Sacrifice.

Copydon.

No fooner can Aurora's golden face disclose,
And Living Clocks tell Night's gone to repose,
But I my Sheep and Lambs most careful view,
And from full udders then extract the dew,
Due to great Pan, and of my kine take care,
The joyful lifue of their Mothers fair;
But what Redounds from your Elaborat care and skill, Declare, for I expect it, with Impatience still.

Pilicato2.

I view the Meads, and see how Flora's Love
Not given in vain, and Mortal's still Improve
By spacious Landskips, to our nicer eyes,
The true Contentments sugards seldom prize,
Who spends three parts of Lingering life in sleep,
Then rise to dine and sup, again to creep
Between the sheets, with drowlie dreams there ly, Like Morpheus in his latest Agony.

Coppoon.

But yet declare the pleasure that you reap,
Among the streams are swift, and wide, and deep,
For I've observ'd, that there you're most an end.
Piscator, pray now tell unto thy friend,
Thy long experience, I'll with Joy attend,
From your Diviner Counsel all you know,
Be speedy, while we trace this Medow throw,
For at the Old Boundary, there we part,
I to my Kine, and you unto your Art.

Pricator.

Corydon, if for this time, your time you can enlarge The mornings fair, and let your Hind take charge For once, of your fat Herd, the Rivers nigh, Where I'll demonstrate the pleasure I Injoy. By occular inspection you shall see, If Angling be n't a part of Heaven's Divinity.

While

While we with patience here, and with pure minds, Reap the contentment Heaven to Man Injoyns. Observe the streams and see them filent go, How on the bancks a thousand beauties grow, The wise Creator did, in mighty Love bestow On Man, and, by a Providential care, Stock'd all the waters with the Fish are there, Who multiply, and therein largely breed, To give us Joy, and serve us at our need. Tho 'tis confest your stock and care extends The Limits, unto which my study bends.

vistin via Colpdon.

Great is my care, and great my Labours be, Confin'd to be a drudge eternally: Yet use and daily labour brings me gain. When Udders overflow with milk amain. Free from contentions and domeftick strife. The Eternal jarings of a Crabtree life. See yond' front Bullock with his neck new worn. Whole fellows plow the ground for plentious Corn, Which Ceres, as a mighty bleffing, fends, She hath my Love; to Pan my offering bends, Father of Shepherds, we thy Rufficks are As well as Flocks, thy everlafting care; In rural numbers we thy praise rehearse, And pay our Obligations in Immortal verse: No fluent strains but such as Nature gave. Plain as our Souls, but always just and brave. When Amarillis, Phillis, Cloris joyn And make conforting Harmony Divine.

No knowledge in the Husbandmans affairs,
Belong unto my Art, nor all his Teeming cares Know I, nor please my self to see the Oxen Plow,
And Labouring thro' the new made furrows go.
The painful Harrow gives me no delight,
Nor can I comprehend how one short night,
Can give due rest, or yield a sweet repose

I 2

To toylfome swains, that with the Sun still goes, From one care to another, Reapers always sweat, And Ceres bounty yields them labours, yet Full Barns are thresh'd, the winnow'd wheat appears, Which gives both Joy and Trouble to succeeding years, If my advisein Friendly manner, can obtain But your attention, while my observations plain so and How you some hours of tedious life may ease, Controul your cares and sweetly rest in peace.

Coppdon.

Thy Friendship I still own, if fates were free I willing would obtain and learn thy mistery; But cares still cloud my over willing mind, Sprung from the Earth, there's all the Joy I find.

Dicatoz.

Neer mind the Earth, to Heaven lift your eyes, All bieffings come from supream Deities. Those griping Misers, that the Muck adore, Are always empty, and in plenty poor.

Cerpdon.

Earth is my business, and a soil that's rich,
Gives me contentment; fove I still beseech
That all my Teeming Ews may fruitful be,
And Crown my Labours with their large posterity,
So may my Darie daily still abound,
With plentious blessings from my Heisers sound.
'Tis all I covet, Misers Gold admire
The only Loadstone to a fond desire.

Biscater.

Croefus, and Midas, Gold could ne'er content, Ingraven Ingots, all the Gods they meant, But baubles, to the Golden gliftering o'er That Damn'd their Souls, yet dy'd exceeding poor. Coydon, if you'll but gratify me half this day, I will repay your kindness when you turn your Hay, Fain would I now Spectator you should be, If I ha'il't reason to be kind and free.

Almighty Nature bountious bleffing fends, Which I in Love impart unto my friends, Who still pertake, with Liberal hand I strive Their Loves to keep, Eternal Love survive. What greater Treasure can I else bestow, Then that from my affiduous pleasures flow, The River's near, give your attention then, I'll shew you all the beauties of the stream. Under that shady Oak obscure there lie For Gods themselves are private at their missery:

Corpoon.

Piscator, I'll obey; Tou Powers Divine,
Pardon if I mispend my precious time.
Ah, no! I'll contemplate of Heaven and every thing, Great Pan, good notions to my mind now bring While here I stay, and with Industrious care Behold Piscator, what his motions are,
For knowledge none in his sweet art I have,
Such studys only sit the just and brave;
Who with attention and with patience strange.
Hunt thro' the Liquid Element, and change
Their several Chases, as their observations vary, Prosound in knowledge seldom can miscary.
So Herdsman go, a double care extend,
While I this day Piscator do attend.

Pilcato2.

ty

Propitious fortune bless my floating quill,
It which, observing how the Fishes still Nible the bait, then greedy swallow all,
As dying Victims, triumph in their fall,
That Corydon may see the difference and find,
That pleasure soon expels the troubles of the mind,
Immortal Jove, tir'd with the labours of the day
Withdraws, and to new pleasures finds the way.

Toppdon.

Piscator does your eager haste succeed, Or, will your pains supply your present need, The Sun is mounted high, and foon will fall,
But what repair have you for me, or all,
Slight is your frote, your Meager looks denys,
But that your Belly wants its due supplys.
'Tis time, for Nature still refreshment claims,
And hunger still succeeds most pleasing pains.

I have enough for to supply your wish,
And here in Love I do present a Dish:
To save the late expense of your lost time,
Such Fish as now are only in their prime;
A Brace of Jacks, some Chubbs, and more
Three Lusty Pearch I lately brought ashore,
Not naming those of the Ignoble fry,
That greedy swallow and as sudden dye,
Three Dozen, more or less I'm sure, I've ta'en,
A sweet requitat for so small a pain;
Get but a friend or two, and of your store
We'll banquet then this Night, and often more,
Since Neighbours like, in Love we both agree,
We'll Celebrate great Pan, and Neptunes liberality.

LOYDON

Now I'm convinc'd Pifeaton's art's fublime, He profit reaps by his expense of time. By harmless pleasure, yet he always may Contemplate the Eternal bounty of the day; Which gives fuch Inclinations all Divine, Without the Hazard of more precious time, For while he Angles, ferious there he may Consider life, and life's uncertain way, By fleeting time that never yet would fray. Some friends I have at need, and those Shall fup with us, if nothing do oppose, Whole hearts are Cheery, and my home-made Wine Shall mount their Souls more lofty then the Vine. Great Bacchus darling, Pomona's joys are more Then all the Grapes Infipped Fools adore. Command my House, one hour I crave to be

Among

A

T

Is

W

B

L

L

Be

In

Se

T

T

W

N

D

Pi

In

T

Bu

Se

Su

To

u

N

TI

Le

Th

Bu

TH

Fhi

Yo

Ta

Among my kine, and other drudgery,
The Masters eye, make all the Horses fat,
Is the old Proverb, still remember that.

ten midasotable in to he heles he

Well, I'll be Cook, against your quick return,
But bring your friends, for whom I inward mourn,
Lest some dull chance should keep them yet away,
Like tedious Prologue to a duller play.
Be quick dear Corydon, make haste be sure,
Impatience hardly will admit a cure.

Coppdon.

See I have made a quick return, and brought Those friends who form to have an Idle thought,
True friends they be, and such are only rare
Whose well bred Souls, them Noble can declare.
Now here's a Rummer to my friends and you;
Dear hearts be jovial, for ow did adiew.
Piscarors Fish, joyn'd with my home-made Wine,
Instills new vigor to our fleeting time.
Time's still in haste, old Time for none will carry,
But we'll deceive him once, whilst hearts are merry.
See here's a brimmer to our Royal King,
Success attend him, and let every thing
Joy in his wellfare, prosperity still be Upon our Soveraign, and his dignity.

Pilcatoz.

Now call your Cloris, and your Phillis, the That Sings so well, and makes such Harmony, Let's hear those lays, are due to your great Pan, The God of Shepherds, and the Husbandman But Sing in parts and let them both declare The Joys that are in Rustical affair.

ie

ng

Copydon.

Phillis, Cloris, tone your Pipes, and let us hear, Your melody can foon digest our cheer; Take turns to warble forth some pleasing strain, For to delight my friends, who don't distain To hear ken to, and then applaud your choice, Both of the subject, and your sweeter voice.

SONG.

Phill. THen Midnight Ghosts fink to the shades be-

Affrighted, when the Cocks begin to Crow, And tell the day appears,

No longer they must stay, But Instant pack away

Unto Infernal spheres.

Then mortals wake and free from cares
Injoy the Day, expelling fears,

The Lamp of Heaven the Sun

Sends forth his glorious light, And hids adiew to dismal night,

Our labour's then begun, A morning Hymn, and to the Fields away, We Dairy Maiden's have uo time for play,

Love and his Idle houres Negletted always be,
That grand fimplicity

No passime is of ours; But Joys supream, in udders full we find; The blessings of our Kine, we only mind,

Whose overflowing Veins Give Netter at our fire,

That Gods and Men admire Our Happiness and Pains.

SONG.

Cloris. Reat Pan, to thee we all oblisions pay Father of Gods and Men, to thee we No Wolves offend our fold while we (pray,
Are absent as our Husbandry,
Still may our bleating sheep, bring tender Lambs
And mighty Fleeces from our Ewes and Rams,
Thou art their Father, with Paternal care
Protett them and their off-spring fair.

While

1

M

Bà

Ze

While Ceres bounty daily we assend,
Let thy all seeing eye, so far extend,
In Loving rays upon our Flocks,
Preserve and keep their dew's locks.
Which we in stormy weather gently cull,
Then Card and Twist the glorious silver Wool,
The Weavers art, our wan supplys,
Beyond the Ruby Tinstured Dyes,
Homeborn our Souls, and so our lives we lead,
We know no Citys, nor the Courtly breed,
Nor ne'er desire they should prevail,
Over the Dutys to the Milking Pail.

Coppoon.

Piscator, your turn's next, I pray you Sing,
Your Angling pastime, or the Fishes King.
What Kings they have, or what you please belong
To Angling, make the burden of your Song.
But first to clear your Pipes we'll drink,
No time is lost in that I justly think,
Propitious Bacchus, great Inventer of the Vine,
This Rummer's to thy health, and to the sisters Nine,
Immortal lays attend them, and the Lawrel thee,
For Love and Wine gives life to Poetry,

SONG.

Piscator. When first the Harbinger to day,
Tell's Sol's approaching, and a ray
Darts from the shining East.

Then from my Bed, I baffy fly; No fish will come a slugard nigh, By twenty foot at least,

My Tools got ready over Night, I know the hours when they will hite,

And when they wan't be free,
Loofe not the most expelled prime,
But take the most convenient time

When Storms and Clouds none be, When boist'rous Winds in Caves are pens, Zephyrus breezes only uent,

7.

ile

Then

Then I begin to Troul, For bafty Pike, or greedy Jack, Of which I feldom ufe to lack.

And Love them with my Soul. Sol, if his Morning Beams prove fair. With Glorious Skys, ferene the Air,

To Angling then I go.

For Trout, or Pearch, for Roach, or Bleak,

But Chubs I feldom ufe to feek,

And for some reasons know. They eager be to cast themselves away. Before declines the sbort liv'd day,

If there appears 4 fly

On waters calm, tho ne'er fo deep. Without a Ladder, up be'll creep; And Gorge is Inflantly.

Neptune, Commander of the Seas, Thy Queen and Loving Neriades.

That daily we adore.

Propitious to our pastimes be, All Anglers Love thy Deity.

And will for evermore.

Tho' we thy Fifbes do decay, And therein place a supream foy,

With Hooks and Lines,

Tet we no Poachers can abide, That scom eby Majesty, beside

And wish Ignoble crimes

Thy subjects in unlawful Nets. Destroy, and afterward abets.

For to deface thy Throne. Rouse Mighty Monarch of the Seas, And let thy trident, if thou pleafe Confound shem every one.

That so we Anglers daily may, Find store of Game, and freer play, While with attentive eyes,

We mind our floating quill, for then What Victims fall by Angling Men

We to thee Sacrifice.

Call Hobb our Boy and you shall hear him Sing
A Ballet which from Town, he late did bring,
Compos'd of Kniting, and the sweet delight,
That Ladies do Injoy, each morn and night,
While busied thoughts, from Love sequestred be,
And all admire their own Felicity.

SONG Hobb. T TOW pleafans are we, In joys shat are free. Since kniting of knots is the fashion, The Citizens wife. Is void from all firife, While bufied as fuch occupation. The Beau's of the Town. May chance for so frown, . Now kniting so much is requised, By Ladies whose eyes, All Glorys Comprise. Such Sots are always rejected. The Madam of Honour. When vifits come on ber, Finds double delight in ber knitting. An Azmilla of thread. From ber foot to ber bead Declares fbe bas no mind to Filting. Those baubles of plays, That encrease or delays, Expediation into a kind greening, By knitting of knots, Can tell all the Spots, That Lovers Indure at a meeting. The pleasure is such No Wife Man will grusch, The foys of our sweet vocation, While knitting his Wife,

Is spending ber Life,

And all for the Pride of the Nation.

God a mercy Hobb, we thank you for your Song, 'Tis time to part, I think we've tarried long. The Cocks are now begining for to Crow. And each must part, and to his home now go. Left Wives should chide, who are commanders all. Good hours do often keep us from a braul. I'll be those Wives whose clamorous Tongues repay, Our foftest kindness tho we seldom stray. Love be our guide, and Love reftrains our fears. While Love gives health unto succeeding years. Time flys apace as we have tryal made: The Night's too fort, or longer I'd a faid. Now take my thanks, kind Corydon, your friends Accept the fame, my mind now homeward tends Lest dubious thoughts, in my Loves breaft should rife. And anger breed, which to prevent be wife, And keep good hours, tho now I did exceed Twas Love, 'twas Kindness to my friend indeed. Sinister actions, let none willing try Good night, prosperity attend you all, good buy. Copydon.

Pifcator's gone, in joys he's doubly bleft, While all tranquilities poffes his Breaft; Pious his Soul, contentment in his mind. The greatest Treasure Mortals here can find. See with with what freedom, and what Love he gave His Labours, which declare him Nobly brave. Some of his Fish, undrest; my friends, remains, Take to your homes, and there Injoy his pains, Which he efteems no labour, had I his Art. I'd spare some time from Toylsome Plow and Cart. Sweet is the pleafure that Mans Soul poffels. VVhere loys create a lafting happiness. Such is an Anglers, who from grief or care, Curbs with difcretion, thoughts that bring dispair. Tho I'm no Angler, Anglers ftill I'll love, For Anglers Patience comes from Mighty Fove. Post-

Postscript.

W Ednesday the eighth of March, 1699.
At Nine a Clock at Night, Mr.
Hyde sent his Foot-man to my House, to tell me that he designed to draw his great Fish Pond at Winckburst next morning, and desired me to meet him there to be partaker of his diversion with Captain Comer, and Mr.
Robert Outram, which I did.

I have feen feveral Fish Ponds drawn and abundance of Fish taken, but never in my life fo many at one time.

It was a most pleasing sight to see above a Thousand Golden-scal'd Carps at once lie panting on the ground; Some of them above twenty Inches in Length, and silently seem'd to lament their Captivity, and among them some over-grown Pearches of eighteen Inches long, whose Porcupine backs and gaping mouths which discover'd Teeth as sharp as Spanish Needles, that seemed to threaten the Speciators for debaring them from their proper Element; beside an Infinite Number of most curious Tench, and small Pearch, to the great Amazement of the beholders.

The reason why Mr. Hyde, sew'd his great Pond, was, because he would stock his new Fish Pond at his House at Sundridge Place, with only choice Fish, and it is a curious Pond indeed, into which he put three Hundred and Fifty of those Carps which were from Sixteen to twenty Inches in length, beside the large Pearches with abundance of small ones.

Which in two years time will grow large, a great many Curious Tench were put in with them, befide a Kilderkin full of very large Silver Eeles, some of them as big as a Mans wrist.

The Fish were carried in a Waggon, drawn by a stout Team of Horses from Winckburst Pond to his House at Sundridge, being about four Mile distant one from the other; beside he sent four Hundred delicate Carps to his stews at Bore-place, another of his seats which he keeps always ready to pleasure his Friends and Gentry, who often visit him for their Recreation at both places, but most commonly at Sundridge, where he chiefly resides.

The Carps are commendable, they don't eat muddy, for a continual stream preserves them from the offensive taste that most have in other Ponds, that want the conveniency of a stream; and Winckburst Pond is of such extent, that they were ten days in leting out the water, and the last two days several Peopl

ar

ar fo

ju av

h

fit

fo

man

Ca

h

n

N

a

a

n

ple watch'd by a good fire Night and Day, and wanted not the Blefling of Roaft Beef and Napy Ale, which Mr. Hyde conftantly fupply'd them with: It's impossible to tell the just Number of Fish we took, for he gave away abundance of every fort to all those he would lend a helping hand, as well Labourers as Friendly Spectators, whose Curiosity brought them to Injoy the delight that Lovely Spectacle invited them to.

ew

ce

ous

ınere

e-

of ze, ith ge ns

m, m

Te.

he

ite

of

a-fit

ot fly

it es

VC

cy

ch

ut

oole

Among the fine Carps he gave me, with fome Silver Eeles, he was pleased to present me with one Pearch of thirteen Inches long and nine Inches over, I weigh'd it when I came home, and it weigh'd one Pound ten Ounces, and had an other Fish in his Belly, but it was nothing in Comparison to those he carried to Sundridge place, when we had fent away our choice Fish we stock'd Winckburst Pond again, and put in two thousand Carps from nine Inches to fourteen in length, not reckoning the small Pearch and Tench; which might be by guess as many more, which in three hours time were all bravely afloat to their Contentment, by the stream that runs into the Pond.

I can justy sum up of that days Action, that we took two Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty Carps.

Not reckoning those were given away, nor the Tench, nor Pearch, nor Silver Eeles; I am of opinion that no Pond in the County of First, [if in the Nation] had such a stock of Fish, for last Summer I, with Captain Comer and an other Gentleman, did in one Day take with our Angles twenty Brace of Carps of extraordinary growth, if any question the truth of this Postscript, Mr. Hyde hinsself, with Captain Comer, my self, and several other People of good Quality, who were then with us only as Speciators, can justify the Truth.

Winchburst stock'd with 2000 Carps.
Sundridge Place with 0350
Boar Place stews with 0400

Should of motivarien to those bushed two in the back bed ove note: Sole

.viole aid nither In all. 2750

FINIS.

nove? hadloon I owe

Helevior State 2700th ck in ne of de